

The Alley Dog Named Padro by Sarrai

There once was a litter of 12 puppies. They lived in an alley with their mother. The owners couldn't afford the mother and abandoned them. The mother didn't care about the puppies and left them alone in the alley. Padro was the runt of the litter. Some of his brothers and sisters couldn't make it without their mother. Padro and his brother Pablo are some of the few that made it. One day a man named Jack found Padro walking around in the alley. Jack took Padro home and cared for him. He took him to the vet to make sure he was healthy. A few weeks later Jack moved to Hawaii with Padro. Once they got to Hawaii they found a house. They lived there for five months.

On the 8th day of the 6th month they had a tsunami. They were at the beach playing in the water together. Jack got out of the water and sat in the sun for a bit. Padro was still playing in the water but suddenly the water started to shake. There was a loud rumbling sound. Jack looked up. Huge waves started to come straight towards them. Jack called Padro and started to run. Padro and Jack ran as fast as they could. The water blasted on them. After hours and hours of being hit by big and powerful waves, Padro found Jack at a hospital. Jack was ill. He had lost a lot of blood from being hit and cut by sharp things that were in the water. Jack had almost lost his life but when the doctors gave him stitches, he had stopped losing blood. They stayed at the hospital for a few weeks. Then Jack was healed and had the stitches out. Jack and Padro went back to the place they were at before so they wouldn't have to worry about having tsunamis any more.
