

Breaking News: Cats are outnumbering humans, ruling the world, and causing mischief!

By: Huy T.

Facts, not Fiction, about Cats

Hi there, Professor Cat here! Have you ever wondered why when a cat falls down from a tree or jumps from a high distance, it always lands on its four feet? Cats are so flexible that if they were in the Olympics, they would just come home with all the medals and leave humans hanging. Just like humans, cats have their own language to communicate with each other for their own reasons. Maybe to rule the world. Who knows? All the traits of a cat help it survive in the wild, protect itself, or even cause a little bit of mischief. It seems as everywhere you go, there is a cat following you every two miles.

The Ghost Feline

Somewhere in the world was an interesting man that loved ghosts and always wished to see one. Everywhere that he went, he always carried along a human skull with him. Instead of living near his friends, he lives in a house far away out in the open. When it was time for him to go to bed, he opens all the windows and doors of the house, hoping and praying that a ghost would come in. Even his workspace had a skull of a human and was decorated with a horror/scary theme. One day when he was about to sleep, he heard a thump sound coming from the skull at his workplace. The man shot out of his bed and turned on the light quickly only to find nothing there. Disappointed but determined, the man invited one of his friends that also liked ghosts and horror over to his house to spend the night. The same noise from the skull was heard, but there was no ghost. It was time for him to try his plan C: Bring every single friend possible into his house and capture the ghost once and for all when the thump sound occurs. That night when the thump sound occurred for the third time, all the friends threw the net over the workspace. There was wrestling and screeches, which got the friends excited. One of them quickly turned on the light, only to find a stray cat acting innocent and giving them cute cat eyes. It turns out that the cat went in his house looking for some food to eat, which the skull happened to be tasty to chew on.

See what I'm saying? Sometimes a cat's instincts can cause him or her into a lot of trouble with humans. By the way, the lesson of the previous short story is that there are no such thing as ghosts(or at least I hope not).Here's another story that kept a gentleman away from his true love .

The Scaredy Cat !

Once upon a time, there was a man who wanted to visit his girlfriend at night. He wasn't really a fan of unexpected noises that could give you a heart attack. The man had prepared everything: a boat with paddles, flowers, and a suit along with a tie. Even though he was a little scared of the dark, he didn't care and started to row the boat across the raging river. Not smart right? The raging river earns its name for holding the most fastest water current in the whole world with the speed of 175 miles per hour! Obviously what happened was not even an inch away from the ground, the man and his boat flipped over and the man was drenched. Luckily, he was only under an inch away from shore or else he would've been washed away. Furious for not thinking, he went to build a motor for the boat and tried the following night. This time he made it across the river when the motor just ran out of gasoline. Now the only thing that he needed to do was go to the girlfriend's door and ring the doorbell. I guess that didn't happen because when he was about to push the button to activate the doorbell and visit his girlfriend, a little meow came out of the darkness. Forgetting to bring a flashlight along, the man yelped and scared the cat away. As the cat was running it brushed its fur along the man's lower part of the leg. Near the point of having a heart attack right in front of the door, all that was in his mind was jumping into the river, not knowing that he will be washed away. Unfortunately that's exactly what happened and the man was never seen again. All because of a cat.

The moral of the previous story, you might ask? Sometimes noises can fool you and give you some weird reactions, especially when you're alone, but don't let that stop you from what you are trying to achieve.

By the previous two previous short stories, you probably are getting sweaty, shaky, and all that crazy stuff. No need to worry. It will probably be centuries before they even get their hands on the president.(or will it?) Maybe they will learn to understand the English language, learn to build unique gadgets unknown to man kind, and learn to hold them with their little paws. Who knows? What is always important is that you readers focus on living a great life and keep you mind focused away from the bad and scary things that might happen in life. That is life tip #101 in the life tip book and is the most important one. Have fun with the rest of your wonderful life (or at least I hope so) before the cats can take it away!

Just in case you want to buy one of them, here's the site where to buy it:
www.lifetips.com

Cats' population is growing! Cats can cause a lot of mischief sometimes.

A cat trying to get a move on!

Sites of the pictures and research: <http://pets.thenest.com/>

Google images <http://carltonvet.com.au/pet-library/feeding-in-a-multiple-cat-household>

<http://www.moggies.co.uk/funnies/funpicts.html>

<http://www.becauseimacat.com/cat-pictures/cats-causing-trouble/>

<http://www.sortra.com/hilarious-photos-of-cats-getting-in-all-sorts-of-trouble/>

Emoji keyboard: <https://emojikeyboard.org/>

PS: these are real websites! Just in case any of this is copyright