The new girls at school

This story is about Lily who is 12 years old who never went to pre-k to 7th grade and she should be at 8th grade by now. Lily was a very smart girl but never had opportunities to get better education. Lily who more than anything wants to be a teacher and help those kids learn. Her mom keeps telling her to study so she can go take her GED. Lily still wants to be a teacher and learn more. She finally signed up to take her GED to go to college. But when her friends came over at night they bullied her because she didn't go to school! So made her feel sad and she's tired of everybody telling mean things and bullies her. Lily uses her anger for good and studies super hard so that she can pass the test. Monday is the day! She walks in the testing room and feels nervous that she couldn't pass the test. She feels like her face is red. She feels like she wants to cry, but takes all that away and gets ready for the test. They gave her the test. When she was about to grab it she saw her hand shaking, she grabbed it, took the pencil and wrote. There was so many problems like about 100, but she still tried her best! Soon, she was done. she told them that she was finished they got her paper and looked at it, and looked at it, and looked at it again. They just said "You past the test". She was crying with tears of joy! Soon, Lily started college and four
