

The Invisible Sisters by Taeja

There was a school. There were two girls. They were sisters. They had no friends. All they had is each other. In the morning when the girls come to school, they put their backpacks in the back of the room. Then they take a seat and do their work.

However, all the other kids are talking and having fun. After they do their morning work, they just read. They are always good but the teacher does not notice. They feel sad. They feel like they are just in a hole, deep into the ground. If they not have each other, they would fall too deep.

Then one day, they are in class and they are working into lunchtime. A kid named Jazmine came up to them and said, "Hi, I know you don't really play with anyone, so can we play at recess?" The girls felt something inside them that they never felt before. They quickly said, "Yes, we would love to!" At recess they felt happy! When they went home that day, everything changed. They always said, "If it was not for Jazmine we would still be invisible."
