Chapter 1

A New World Discovered

There was a king of a world smaller than you see. Worthy to fight any person who stands up to him. He was the protector of the great land Arkabass.

There were two men in their office working on a project. Next door lived a disturbing neighbor, that had a shrink ray hidden in his attic. Without warning, the shrink ray fired, shot out of the neighbor's house, across the yard, through the window and struck the two men. When they were looking on the computer it shrank them, but they landed on one of the keys of the keyboard. The key that once would fit under their finger was now the size of them. They saw people wearing clothes made of strips of paper. They followed them and came up to a crowd of people all going around a golden structure. But what could this be, a pencil holder? "Where are we?", said Jonathan. "But this looks like my office, but bigger." They looked past all the people and saw someone wearing a crown made of paper. He was a tall man that towered over everyone else and roared with a thundering voice, "What is your name?" Jonathan said, "I'm Jonathan and this is Matt." "How did we get here?" The king replied, "I had my people shrink you because you threatened our great land, so now we come to have war with you." The king said, "Go to the other side of the platform of the Great Kingdom of Arkabass." "There is where you will find people like you to make your team from before we have a war," the king said in an evil voice. "You must win the battle and I will then return you to normal size and let you be free. "NOW GO BEFORE WE PUSH YOU OFF THE EDGE!"

Chapter 2

Building Teams

Jonathan and Matt started to make their way to the other side of the desk in hopes to find a team to help fight the king. They walked across the computer, careful not to fall or trip in the cracks of the keys. The moonlight was glaring over them, and thought it must be very late, so they found a handkerchief and wrapped themselves up to make a cozy bed.

The next morning, they woke up to see people walking up to them and saying, "Wake up, who are you?" These were kind people, but they didn't wear paper strips like the others, they wore candy wrappers. Matt said, "The king sent us here to battle, and we must beat him to get back to normal size." The kind people said, "We will join your team, we are called the Keepers because we keep the new people that come here from getting pushed off the edge by the king." "Now we need to gather materials to battle the king." "We can look for pencils and paperclips to cut and make into bows and arrows and swords." They gathered all their materials along their journey. They had to walk what seemed like miles that was once just inches across a desk. A single pencil now took three men to carry and took six men to cut a paper clip. The weapons were ready, and just in time because they were about to have battle but not with the king.

Chapter 3

Cute but Deadly

The adventure continued across the great desk when they heard a loud, scary, extratextual noise coming from the stairs outside the door. A giant furry creature covered in hair made footsteps shake the ground like an earthquake. Jonathan looked down and realized that was his cat. Normally cute and cuddly, but Nibbles was now a beast. Hoping he would not jump on the desk to trample them, they hid with fear. The Keepers leader whispered, "Oh that is who we call Bessie the Beast, watch out she has sharp claws, be prepared if she jumps up and sees you." Matt said, "What if we make a paper airplane and draw a bird on it to get her out the door." So, they gathered paper, a pencil, two popsicle sticks and a rubber band. They folded the paper airplane and tried to draw the best bird they could. They put the rubber band and popsicle sticks together to hold the sling shot in place and launch the plane out the door. Nibble went running after the plane the sound of thunder.

Chapter 4

The War Begun

The Keepers approach the King's territory armed with bows and arrows. The King's team had better weapons and the people were stronger, but the Keepers had more hope they would win. The King's team made a shout of thunder, so the Keepers ran towards them. The Keepers team was winning because unknowingly to the Keepers, candy wrappers were stronger than paper. So, when a weapon hit them it strangely deflected but did not injure them. The Keepers took out every single person except for the king. The king was so terrified that he said, "I will put you back to normal size for good if you treat us with respect." Jonathan said, "We will help your people if you promise to let the Keepers live in the Kingdom and treat all the people equally. The king told his men to grow Jonathan and Matt back to normal size.

Chapter 5

Peace Throughout the World

Jonathan, Matt and the Kingdom of Arkabass went with their normal day from there on. Every month Jonathan and Matt would give the people of Arkabass food, clothing and the materials they needed to survive. They made them some paper airplanes to distract Nibbles if he got in the office again. The king kept to his word and never treated the Keepers unfairly again. You never know when there is a little world underneath your feet.
