

Danger on a Lucky Day

By: Halen S.

Twenty-nine year old Clark always wanted to go to the beach. Today was the lucky day. He finally saved up enough money to go to the beach. He did not even waste one penny. Once he got half way to the shore, he stepped on something hard. He turned around and saw that it was a huge golden nugget! He stopped to pick it up and could not believe his luck! He continued walking to the beach with the gold in his pocket.

When he is three-fourths of the way to the shore line he looked down and saw a dead poisonous jellyfish just before he stepped on it. He thought to himself "Today is my lucky day!"

He continued his walk in to the ocean water. Once he had waded out three feet into the ocean water, he started swimming around in the water a little bit. Soon he realized that the rip tide had carried him way further into the ocean.

Suddenly, he saw a whirlpool starting to form in the distance. The whirlpool was pulling all nearby objects into it. He saw seaweed, stones, and sharks swirling in it. All of a sudden, a shark that was being pulled into the whirlpool bit him on the right leg and loses consciousness.

When he wakes up he sees a large shark bite with sand all over it. He checked his pocket for the gold nugget and it had washed away in the current. When he picks him up she took him to a clinic. The nurse cleaned the sand out of his leg and bandaged him.

A week later he went back to the beach. He finds the gold nugget near the shore. This time he walks straight to his car and drives home with the gold in his pocket.
