

Believers

By: Spencer M.

Dana and Alhana are sisters who don't believe in love. Which makes Valentine's Day the most pointless holiday ever! All their friends at school are all excited about the Valentine's Day dance but not Dana and Alhana. Tomorrow is Valentine's Day so, tonight Dana is trying to prepare for tomorrow while Alhana is trying to get sick.

The next day, as Alhana and Dana were ready for the Valentine's Day dance, they found notes in their lockers! They excitedly read the notes at the same time. Dana found that her note was from a secret admirer but she had a sneaking suspicion that it was from Nate. Alhana's note was from Luis. Luis has been in love with Alhana since kindergarten.

Alhana ran to find Luis. "Thank you for the note! I used to believe I couldn't love anyone else but my sister since my parents divorced. Then, we became friends and I've changed... I love you too" Alhana said. "The only problem is that we can't tell my sister about this because she'll be angry." At the same time, Dana found Nate and asked "Did you give me a note?" Nate said "Yes and I meant every word in the note.” Dana felt shocked but happy about what Nate said, almost like she was in love but they couldn’t tell Alhana because they made a pact not to believe in love.

So, the girls went to their classes, each keeping a secret from each other. Until lunch when they couldn’t keep the secret in any longer. Dana told Alhana about Nate and that she thought she was in love. Alhana laughed and said she felt way about Luis together they said “So were both in love!” This year’s Valentine’s Day Dance was going to be the best one ever as soon as they found Nate and Luis!

Inside the dance, the guys were standing by the punch bowl holding two drinks of fruit punch. “You ready for this?” Dana asked “Yes” Alhana answered. They walked toward them ready to have the best time ever! After finishing their punch, they moved to the dance floor and began to dance as a slow song started.

They kept on dancing until their feet started to hurt. When the principal said that the party was over, Dana and Alhana were sad. They wanted to go with them but the guys were in different classes. So, they said goodbye to the guys for now because they knew they would see them later. They would just have to wait until school was over.

Once school was out, they raced to find them only Nate and Luis were gone! They went everywhere but they couldn't find them. Dana and Alhana asked friends where they could they have gone but no one knew. They went home really disappointed since they couldn't find them.

Later that evening, Dana and Alhana went to for the family dinner to Malloy's a pizza and ice cream restaurant. When they got there, they were so surprised! Across the room they saw Luis and Nate! The girls were so excited that they asked their parents to let the kids sit at their own table. Since they love pepperoni, Nate and Dana got a large pepperoni pizza. Luis and Alhana shared a different because they both love meat lovers. After dinner, they played in the arcade. At the very end, they shared two strawberry shakes, one for each couple. The girls were so happy to share dinner with their new loves. It was almost the end of Valentine's Day and they had to say goodbye to each other. As they were leaving the restaurant, the funniest song came on from the end of that movie with the ogres Dana leaned over to Alhana and said "Now, I'm a believer!" and Alhana said "Me too!"
