

SHARKS!

By: Kiernan B.

One summer day 11-year-old Sander Rogers was swimming with his 9-year-old sister Sally in the Atlantic Ocean. When it was time to leave, Sander saw a dark fin floating across the water, but he didn't really pay much attention. Two days later they swam in the ocean again. When they left, he saw two fins in the water. The next day, he saw three fins in the water. Something was not right.

On the last day of the vacation they had been at the beach for 30 minutes when Sander heard, "SHARK!" except it wasn't just one shark, it was four! Then he saw the worst. Sally was still in the water! Before he could think he was swimming to his sister to save her. The fins were getting closer and closer and he found himself swimming at top speed towards Sally. He grabbed his sister and began kicking towards safety. He was almost to the shore when SNAP! Everything went white.

The next thing he knew he found himself in the hospital. He was so glad that he was alive! There were white sheets, white walls, practically everything was white. He had a kind nurse. She told him that the shark had done serious damage to his leg. She told Sander that sharks can mistake people for their natural prey but they don't really want to hurt people. Two weeks later he was out of the hospital and guess what he did? He went straight to the water because he knew that sharks were not bad.
