

Summer Money

By Megann S.

This is a story about a boy named Jack, who lived in Jacksonville, Florida, but he always wanted to go to San Diego, California. That was all the way across the world.

Jack would do anything to go, but his parents unfortunately did not have enough money to pay for the trip to San Diego, California. He looked in his penny bank every day for one year, but still did not have enough money to pay for the trip.

He had to get a job, but he was only 10. Where would a 10 year old get a job in Jacksonville, Florida? So he started a lemonade stand. At first business was slow, so he had to think of an idea to get more customers. He decided to move it to the beach, and he got a lot of customers really quickly. In 48 days he had enough money to go to San Diego, California, and he even had enough money to buy souvenirs in San Diego, California.
