

Abigail's Early Adventure

By: Emily A.

Once upon a time, in the city of San Francisco, there lived a girl named Abigail. She was four years old and her fifth birthday was coming up soon. For her, life was boring. Very boring. Abigail was an only child. Her parents, Jonathan and Lisa, were either busy or tired from a long day of work. "Will I ever have a sibling, a pet, or something to play with?" Abigail asked her parents. "Maybe.", her parents always said. On her fifth birthday, she wished that her parents would have a baby. Three months later, Abigail and her family went to IHOP one night to get dessert. Her parents surprised her with sharing some big news that they were going to have a baby! Abigail couldn't believe that her dreams of holding her little sibling, playing with her sibling, and so many other things! The next day, Abigail drew so many pictures of her parents, herself, and her little sibling all together. Nine months later, it was time for the baby to be born! Abigail stayed with her grandparents for the night while her mom was giving birth. She was telling her grandma and grandpa how excited she was to have a little sibling! At Christus Santa Rosa, (the hospital) the doctors and nurses were having so many different kinds of problems with the baby. When they finally got the baby out, the baby could not breathe, so it ended up dying. Abigail's dad called her grandparents to tell them what happened. They didn't tell her what had happened, but they still took her to the hospital so her parents could tell her.
