

Henry's Way Home By. Brayden G.

Boom, bang, crack! The train shakes in the storm. This story is about a 11-year-old boy named Henry. Henry lives with his mean, so called "grandparents". All he wants is to be free. So, he does what no other kid would do. He runs away! But there is a surprise waiting for him. Read to find out what happens.

"Henry!" his grandma yells. Henry does what he does every morning, he goes downstairs. "What's for breakfast?" Henry asks. "An onion," said his grandma. So, Henry got an onion and left for school. But he didn't go straight to school. He went to McDonalds for breakfast. His grandparents didn't know that he got McDonalds. When he finished, off to school he went. When school was done it was raining and there was thunder. But Henry still walked home. Suddenly bang! A tree falls in his path. So, he took another path. Just then he thought of an idea. He was going to hop on a train to be free. When he was right next to the train, he saw his grandma. He thought, why is she here? But he still jumped on the train. His grandma chased after the train, but she was too slow. He was finally free.

All of a sudden boom, bang, crack! The train shakes in the storm. "I guess I'm going on foot," Henry thought. What Henry didn't know was that his grandparents were not his actual grandparents. His actual parents were at the train station working. When he passed the train station someone ran out and said, "Son is that you?" in a deep voice. Henry thought he was hearing things, but when some guy walked up, he remembered that it was his Dad. "Dad is that you?" asked Henry. "Yes," said his Dad. So, Henry went with his Dad to the police, and Henry took the police to the people who stole him when he was a baby. When they got there, they arrested the people who stole him. On the way from the police station Henry asked a lot of questions. Finally, the guy turned back at Henry, and his eyes were glowing red. Henry asked, "Are you a human?" "No, I'm a...demon." The man/demon said. Finally, the car stopped in the middle of the woods. The man/demon took Henry to a bunker and locked him up. Then it clicked! The people who stole him when he was a baby were trying to save him. Now Henry was MAD at himself! He tried to get out of the cell. Then he remembered that he had breakfast grease from his sandwich. So, Henry got his patty off the sandwich and rubbed it all on himself. Then he slipped through the bars of the cell. Finally, he got out into the woods and ran to the police station. When he got there the police didn't believe him. All of a sudden, "I'm going to kill you!" yelled the man/demon "We got code RED." The policeman said into the radio. Then Henry ran outside and yelled, "Over here!" then the demon flew after him. What the demon didn't know was that the military was waiting for him to come close. When Henry was behind the military, they all shot at the demon.

The demon came flying down. Then Henry came up and kicked the demon in the face, then the demon blew up. So, Henry lived with the so-called grandparents, well now they were his real grandparents. Henry made a lot of money for catching a demon. He was rich, he was famous, and people say that his best character trait was happiness.
