

Sky

Once there was a girl named Sky. She walked home from school every day. One chilly October day while walking home, she spotted a beautiful doll that looked just like her. She looked over the doll. It had long dark hair, light blue eyes, a blue sweater, a light pink shirt, and blue jeans. Just like Sky.

The doll sat in a toy store window. Sky noticed that she had never seen the toy store before, as if it had popped out of thin air. But right then Sky did not care about that. All she wanted was that doll. Sky carefully crept inside. Odd, nobody was there, yet the door was unlocked. She tossed this thought aside and grabbed the doll

Sky left the store and started to make her way home. But on the way she started to feel as if she could not control herself.

Then the doll started to move. Sky screamed, dropped the doll, and tried to run. But she fell over just like the doll had. The doll stood up. So did Sky. “Don’t worry, she told Sky softly. “I can make you better.” The doll gave an evil grin.

“Sky you will help me awaken my friends.” The doll started to shout, “The day has come, the rain will end, the dolls will come back again!” Sky dropped dead. Millions of dolls came and gathered around Sky’s doll. The doll took out a small box and opened it. Sky’s spirit flew in the open box. “Foolish human, she fell right into my trick.” The dolls dug a hole and buried the box. “As long the box is safe, I shall live.” Sky’s doll proclaimed. Then she added, “Did everyone get rid of their humans?” All of the dolls nodded.

“Lovely, let us find the stuffed animals, for I really hate dogs.