

A Lost Girl by Abigail M.

There was a girl named Amber who lived on a farm in Alabama. Amber loved her family. During the summer, when she was five years old, she visited the nearby mall with her family. At the mall Amber spotted a toy. It was a little stuffed piglet. Amber ran to the toy to get a closer look. As she held the toy, she remembered her farm and her family that she loves and then she looked up and did not see her mom or dad. Amber began to cry. She was lost!

As she cried another little girl saw Amber. She walked up to her and said, "Hey, are you lost? I am lost too."

Amber was surprised. The little girl was not crying. She was so brave.

"My name is Abigail", said the girl. "Come with me. I know what to do." Abigail walked with Amber to someone who worked at the store. Abigail knew she worked there because she had a name tag. "We are lost", Abigail says to the worker.

The worker called the mall police. Amber and Abigail waited in a room. There were books and toys. Amber was happy because she was not alone. Abigail played with her and made funny jokes. Amber was happy she made a friend.

Then the police came in and said pointing to Amber first. "Is your name Amber and is your name Abigail?"

"Yes!!!" They replied at the same time.

"Your parents have been looking for you", said the police.

When the girls' parents walked in they gave their parents the super squeeze hug ever. Amber said to her mom, "I made a new friend and her name is Abigail."

Abigail told her mom, "I made a friend and her name is Amber,"

After they left the waiting room the two families went to lunch. They went back to the toy shop to get the toys they were shopping for. Amber got her piglet and named it Abigail. It was time to go home. Amber and Abigail got sad as they hugged and said their goodbyes.

A few weeks later Amber was getting ready for school. She couldn't wait to see her old friends, but missed her friend, Abigail and wished she could see her again. Imagine her surprise when she gets to school and sees Abigail in the same class. Amber ran to Abigail and gave her the biggest hug. From that day forward, they became best friends.
