

Bonding, Bullying, Basketball

By Kaden P.

Chris and Daniel were best friends. They did everything together. They were both 9 years old. The two kids were both going to 4th grade.

On their first day at school they were in different classes. Chris was in Ms. Gaska's class and Daniel was in Ms. Wendor's class. Later at recess, Daniel said, "I'm going to play with the cool kids, Aaron and Mike". Chris was sad and confused for Daniel was never that rude.

Chris went to play with other kids. Then Chris met a foster kid, Ian, and a kid with autism, Eli. Chris asked them, "Do you want to play basketball?"

Ian said, "If Andrea can play." Andrea was a girl in a wheelchair.

Chris said me vs. all of you, but the other kids won. Ian got into a fight at foster care, so he trained to get stronger. Andrea used her wheelchair speed. Last of all Eli used strategies.

Later at recess when Daniel went around bullying people he was challenged to a basketball match by the four friends. Ian passed the ball to Chris, and then blocked Aaron. Mike took the ball and ran to the goal. But then Andrea stole the ball and Eli told her to make Daniel dizzy. Andrea passed the ball to Chris and he made a 3 pointer.

Chris and his three friends told Daniel to stop bullying others because of their different, unique, or exquisite traits. Daniel agreed and told Mike and Arron the same. Then all the bullying stopped. The seven kids were now all friends.
