

The Long Lost Mom

By Annika B.

There once was a wolf that had great character. He was a big white wolf, with a howl of a whale. He was very shy but he managed to make friends. He was raised by his grandmother, but not knowing why. But he still never let that stop him, as he couldn't wait to find out. His grandmother had never told him why his mother was gone.

One morning he woke up to a loud scream. "Ahhh" He ran into his grandmother's room to see what was going on. His grandmother was there lying on the floor with no movement. It was like she was frozen in shock, with blood and gunshots in her stomach.

That was the day that he decided to find his mom once and for all!

He set on track into the woods where he thought his grandmother would have something that could help him find her. As he went through her stuff, he had found a map of one deadly circle.

As he kept looking he found a note, as it read, "If you are reading this you must be twenty." In his mind he knew he was only sixteen, but he read it anyway. As he continued, "Your mother is in the deadly circle. It is very dangerous, so if you go you must follow these directions. If it suddenly goes silent, you must too. Number two, whatever you do, do not look the Yetis in the eye. And last but not least, do NOT lose this paper!"

As for the last time he gave his grandmother a kiss as tears flowed down his face. "I love you grandmother."

When he went away, he knew it would be a big adventure just waiting to happen.

As the adventure set off he became very scared. He met some new friends along the way. One was a fox, a very intelligent fox.

The second one was another winter wolf, he was very charming, but not as smart as him and the fox.

But the final friend already knew him somehow. She knew all about him and was also an older winter wolf.

They spent overnight in a little den, in the middle of the forest. As they woke in the morning, their stomachs were empty. They had to find something to eat.

When they were finished eating some hibernating squirrels, the very intelligent fox asked, "So where are you actually going?" He said with a very confused look on this face.

The wolf said that they are going on just a fun adventure and they will be o.k.

So they believed him and set foot back on the trail.

As they continued the process, they finally arrived at the deadly circle. All of his friends started to act like they had never heard of it before. Although he knew they did know something about what they were seeing.

Soon after the friend group started joking around, they heard a loud "Roooooaaar!" They knew that they were not safe there, so they ran...right into a Yeti!

They were so stunned and shaky they barely made it to the other side of the circle, right into another Yeti!

Soon all of the Yetis gathered around, blocking the whole perimeter of the circle. The friends tried their best to stay calm. The white wolf tried to remember all of the rules from the paper when CLICK! He remembered that you're not supposed to look the Yetis in the eyes! As he screamed out the rule, the Yetis ran away. But only one, The Grand Master Yeti stayed. In a very deep voice, the yeti exclaimed "You Will Never Escape!"

As the friend group panicked, the Yeti tried to squash them!

They ran away as fast as they could. And at last they were safe, all together huddled up, in the same huddle that they were in before they were attacked.

There was one more surprise they got that day! The older lady wolf of the group was the long lost mom of the big white wolf.
