The Forgotten One
By Ava C.

There was a girl named Olivia, she loved everyone, even people who were rude. One day, she went to a bakery. An Italian lady greeted her. Olivia said “hi do you hav-” “hello darling, what’s your name, we have pies, muffins, bread, and sourdough” said the Italian lady. “Woah woah, slow down, I’d like a strawberry muffin and some sourdough,” Olivia said. “Right up” the Italian lady said. Olivia sat down, then a strange woman walked into the bakery. She didn’t order, she just sat down. Olivia didn’t think much of it, she started to daydream. Then, someone called her name but they said it louder “Order for Olivia!” the Italian lady said. She looked back but the strange lady was gone, but the sourdough was in front of her and so was her muffin. When she got home, it was a little late but she didn’t worry. Her mom was watching a show. She greeted Olivia “hey honey”. Olivia replied back “hey mom, I have your sourdough”. She cut the dough into four pieces and shared her muffin. The next day, Olivia woke up. She yawned then went downstairs. It was breakfast time. Her mom was in the living room. “Hi mom”. Her mom didn’t respond, so she went in front of her, nothing, so Olivia screamed, nothing, so Olivia got ready for school. She said bye but when Olivia opened the door, her mom got scared “who’s there, I have a spoon”. She was eating Nutella, so Olivia closed the door. She was at the bus stop, then she was about to get on then it drove away. “Butternuts” she frustratedly said, so she walked to school. When she got to school, she thought her mom was sleep talking earlier. She went to talk to her friend. Her friend looked bored so she said “hey, what you doing”. Her friend didn’t say anything to her so she went to class. Mrs. Hermit was doing attendance. Mrs. Hermit is her elective teacher. “Maya”, her teacher said. “Blah blah blah”. The kids were talking like crazy, but then Olivia thought to herself “what if I just skip school and go, no one can see me”. So she went out of the class, Mrs. Hermit was yelling so no one noticed she left. She just walked around town. Then, someone called her over and dropped something, then ran away. She picked up the thing, then went home because school was over. It was a long walk. After school, she went home. Her mom was at work so she got to the door and tried opening it. It didn’t open, so she went to her backyard. She tried opening the gate, it didn't open. So she jumped over the gate, then she went in her house. The back door never locks. Then she went to her room and opened the note with a cookie. The note said "if you want to go back to your normal form, you have to eat this cookie". She really wanted to go back. She found a glass of water then ate it. It was her favorite cookie, red velvet chocolate chip. When her mom came home, Olivia gave her mom the biggest hug. Her mom had no idea why, but her mom hugged her back.