

The Surprise Party

by Zynel S.

Once there was a girl named Bri. She was thirteen years old, and she liked to play with her friends. One day her friends didn't want to play with her. Bri was trying to find out why, so she went to their houses and asked their parents if they can come out and play, but their parents said they couldn't play today.

Bri was wondering if she said or did something that made them upset at her, but that couldn't be it. Soon enough she went back home, ate dinner, and went to bed. The next day she went back outside to see if her friends were there. So she went back to their houses, and asked their parents again, but their parents said the same thing as yesterday.

Bri was sad. She really thought that she did something to make them upset at her. She really did. The next day when she woke up and went downstairs. It was dark. All the windows were covered. No sunlight went in or out. She turned on the light. Everyone said, "Surprise!" including her friends and their parents. In the end she forgot it was her birthday.
