

THE KEYS

By Diego R.

It was a cold winter morning, when I woke up feeling sick, so my mom let me stay home for the day. She told me to not go to school, stay in bed and rest, while she made chicken soup for me to get better.

I started to feel a little better, so I thought, and decided that it was time to play some games. I played some micro-karts, and fell asleep playing. I woke up a bit later only to find some car keys on my dresser. I was curious so I touched the keys and boom! I immediately got teleported into a racecar in the middle of a race! It did not take long for me to realize that I was in the game! I was doing great, flying on the track, passing all other cars left and right. I was fighting for first place, and when I was about to get the checkered flag and win ... my mom woke me up! She said: "Diego, wake up and come and eat your soup." So I woke up, still mad that I was not able to finish my dream and win the race, but as I was leaving my room to go downstairs, I looked back at my dresser and I saw THE CAR KEYS!?! ...
