

The Basketball Bully

By Omari R.

Once upon a time there was a little boy who wanted to play with kids in basketball. He didn't want to go because he was shy and thought nobody wanted to play with him. Until one of them said "Come on you can play". And when he was waiting he was going to play with the bullies but he didn't know they were the bullies. So he went to go play and nobody passed him the ball. "Who said you can play twerp," said the captain. And when the kid came back from getting the ball they played. "Let's go play with them" the captain said evilly. And when they went over there the captain said "You guys want to play?" "No thank you," the kid said nicely. And they bounced the ball and it was flat. So the kid went in the garage where the balls are, "Don't dare get that ball," the captain said. He was thinking, then grabbed the ball. "Okay, you asked for it" he said. So he closed the garage door. "Help! Get me out of here!" the kid said. "You shouldn't have touched that ball," the bull said. Some kids came and said "There is ice cream, come on, come on." "Is there really," the bully said. "Alright come on! Let's get some ice cream," the bully said. And the kid's friends came to help him out of the garage. "Are you ok?" his friend said. "Yea now let's play!" the kid said. "You're welcome. Get that ball," he said. "Okay" the kid said. So he got the ball and they played and never got bullied again.

The End.
