Once upon a time there was a girl named Daisy. She was the perfect Daisy. She had a dream that she was not perfect. That was worst dream. She woke up scared. Then she went to her mom's room, but her mom was not there. Afterwards, she went to the kitchen for food. She was scared because there was blood everywhere. She then realized that she was the only one in the house.

She tried looking for her parents, but she could not find them, so she wanted to give up. She was thinking of ways to find them. She was trying to find out where they were. Nothing was working, so she was so sad. Suddenly, she saw a paper that looked like a newspaper, but it was a map.

The map had secret codes that Daysi tried to figure out. She thought that if she figured out the codes, would be able to find her parents. She tried all night, and finally, just before daylight, she got the code. In the code, there was a number and an address. Daysi ran out of the house to find a taxi to the place. When she got there, she used the numbers to try to open the door, but she also needed a key to get in. The key was under the map. The map took her to the basement. She looked around to find the key. Finally, she found it under the rug.

The basement was cold and dark, but Daysi had to be brave. She called out for her parents, and they began to yell. She ran to them and hugged them. Then she let them lose and they all went home. No one knows who took them to the basement, or who left the map with the directions, but Daysi was happy to find her parents.
