

MARIA by Alexa G.

Somebody by the name of Maria a little girl who had just moved to the U.S from Mexico was bullied and teased for the way she spoke. Her accent a thick Mexican accent which made her stand out from everybody else. For one little boy Jonathan that was funny, that was a joke it made him forget about his own problems so he did it everyday. Maria she was tired of it and tired of crying in the bathroom she needed to tell someone but who wants to be friends with the lonely quiet girl? There was no way she was gonna make friends if she kept hiding who she really was cause on the inside she was a creative artistic person. Maria was on the way to school, when she saw a little girl named Carla she was in her math class so she didn't know her well, besides the fact that she was a know it all. Maria was smart too just too scared to be wrong part of what was holding her back from having a friend or even someone to talk too. Maria was just entering school when Jonathan shoved her to the wall saying "you gonna cry?" but this time Maria said "NO IM NOT IM NOT YOUR TOY IM NOT SOMETHING YOU CAN PUSH AND SHOVE AROUND WHENEVER YOU FEEL LIKE IT! Maria was mad at Jonathan for being rude and bullying her but at the same time felt sympathy for him. So Maria did the most mature thing I've ever seen (maybe even more mature than me) she wrote him a letter saying this "Jonathan I know you pick on me everyday but there has to be a reason behind it if there is I want to know". The next day Jonathan approached Maria and handed her a piece of paper, saying how he was sorry and he shouldn't have taken his problems out on her. Not long after that they became friends. Good friends Maria and Jonathan were inseparable, and for the first time in forever Maria had a group of friends. So you see sometimes things you want are only steps away from happening, the things holding you back aren't impossible, they're just harder to achieve.
