Grade 4th

Sarah was no ordinary girl. In fact, the best doctors couldn't prove why, but she knew. She could see spirits, ghosts, and many other things regular humans couldn't see. But there was one thing she didn't like about what she could do/see, she was afraid of the ghosts and spirits, she didn't like them either. Halloween was coming close; she was excited but at the same time scared. She had been all around the neighborhood, many people had ghost decorations and she was hoping her family wouldn't bring/take her there for Trick or Treating. Halloween had arrived, she was dressed up as a princess for Halloween, she didn't like being a princess, though she didn't want to complain. Then she had remembered, Mary, Cypher and Joey. The three children were bullies to her. But there was something very odd, their parents were friends, very good friends. She didn't know how and why. Then that moment came, she had met them once again. Their parents were having a little conversation, actually a long conversation. So then, Cypher, Mary and Joey came up with a dare. "Hey little Ms. Sarah! Why don't we play truth or dare?" said Cypher. "Hmmm, I dare you, little Sarah the moment you got home you, have to play... Bloody Mary. She was shocked. How could she do that? She was afraid, it was Halloween, it would definitely work. When she went home, she was very worried. She went into the bathroom and did it once, nothing happened. She did it again, once again nothing happened. Once again, she did it, three Bloody Mary's came out the mirror. Each one said a way that would make them three disappear and never to be seen again. But, only one way was right. She had only two chances, on the first try she had gotten it wrong; she was worried, worried that they would haunt the rest of her life. She was very careful this time. She took ten minutes to choose. And when she chose it..... they had disappeared! She was glad, then she decided that she would never, ever play Bloody Mary again, and that was clear. But little did she know, Cypher, Mary and Joey were the three Bloody Mary's. The End
