

Back in Time to 2011

Asher G. – 3rd Grade

Introduction

The wind literally picked me off of my feet. It was like I was running on air. What is happening I'm thinking. I mean I didn't even know that time travel was real!!!

Chapter One : What in the World!

I mean, it started off like a normal day. Shower, change my clothes, but levitating through the ceiling. Pretty weird, I say. Sure enough, Vlad was gonna levitate through the ceiling. Yep. For (a a very weird) sure. Vlad goes down for breakfast. He needs to go the bathroom, though. When Vlad walked into the bathroom, (I think you know what's gonna happen!) He started floating upward. I must be in a dream, he thinks. Before he knows it, he's sitting on a bench in a city. He quickly grabs a newspaper from a nearby stand. It said, Joplin 2011. Vlad was smart. He knows that, that's the year the Joplin Tornado hit. He even read the I Survived book about it, by Lauren Tarish, but that has not been invented yet.

Chapter Two: The Big Storm

The clouds got dark quickly. Vlad tried to warn the people surrounding him, but they said, "We get storms a lot," "but not a lot of whirlwind, sometimes F1 or F0s," Gee whiz, Vlad thinks. Suddenly, the sirens go off. You start running as fast as you could. Then you see it. He dodges flying debris. Sometimes he even dodged odd things, such a full pizza on fire, a jack-in-the-box still playing. You see a kid who looks about 7 years old lying in a ditch with a baseball glove on. You run toward him, grab him, and run. He was probably running 20 MPH. Vlad jumped into a nearby go-kart and started driving with the kid in the "passenger" seat. You drive at least 10 miles in the opposite direction. "Stay here" Vlad says. "I'm sure rescue workers will come." You drive until the town is out of sight.

Conclusion

Vlad is at home with no levitate. He did not remember what happened. He would never.
