The Texas Bluebonnet

By: Kate S.

One day there was a little girl named Hanna, and she loved all things nature. Seriously she loved trees, flowers, and animals but her sister wasn't really the nature girl, she was more like the girly girl, her name was Halle. But one morning when Hanna woke up she went outside for some fresh air, and then she saw something blue so she looked closer... and there it was. A bluebonnet!!! But this wasn't any kind of bluebonnet this was a Texas bluebonnet. She couldn't believe it, this was the most beautiful thing Hanna has ever seen. It was blue like the sky, and on the end of each petal was a white spot. She was so excited she told her whole class, the teacher, and the principal. When she went to sleep and the only dreams she had was about the bluebonnet. Then a couple of months later it snowed. And Hanna was really sad because the most beautiful thing she had ever seen would be gone. Then that morning she was not that happy as usual. Her sister asked her "why are you so sad?". "Because my bluebonnet is gone", replied Hanna. There she went out the back door just waiting to start crying. Her feet were cold in the wintry snow and had frost bite. Then she looked up...but what? She still saw blue like the sky, and white spots on each pedal. But how, its too cold this must be a magical Texas bluebonnet she thought. So it stayed for years, until Hanna moved out so did the bluebonnet.
