

By: Gracelyn M.

Title: The Daisy Sneeze

Once, there was a cat named Dixie. Oh, how he loves the flower daisy! Dixie has been so happy with the recent bloom of daisies in the backyard garden that he spends all day laying in the beautiful daisy bunches. But every time he went back inside the house Dickson Dixies' person immediately started sneezing uncontrollably. Both Dickson and Dixie have been very worried about the continuing sneeze and are finding ways to help him feel better. The owner and the cat wondered why he kept sneezing only when they played and were trying to have fun. This made Dixie cat incredibly sad and really wished he could help this recurring problem. Mr. Dickson decided to go online and see if he could find a solution to the problem. Alexa said "Taking a nice bath will reduce sneezing" that is a clever idea, Dixie thought; and off Dickson went for a long hot shower. He started the shower and hopped in the tub. About 20 minutes later he got out of the bathroom and was able to relax. He slept until the next morning. Dixie cat wakes up early to the nice sunny day and could not wait to visit his beautiful daisy garden. Dixie had a blast lying and rolling all over daisy flowers, he wished Dickson were well enough to join in on the fun. Dickson felt a little better this morning and tried to make breakfast. He called out to Dixie cat to come have breakfast with him. "Not again," he yelled while letting out a big loud sneeze! Later that afternoon, Dickson goes back online to see if google could cure his problem. He found that putting onions next to his scalp hair will help get rid of sneezing. "I have onions downstairs," he said. He rushed downstairs to get some onions to put in his hair. "I hope this works," he thought. He slept till the next day again, but when he woke up his hair was in a sorry mess and in need of shampoo. He decided to prepare for his day. He washed his hair and showered because he had to go to work. He gave Dixie breakfast and rushed out the door. A few hours later the cat ran to lie in the flowers. The owner arrived from work tired and hungry. The cat ran to his owner in excitement but again he started to sneeze. The owner concluded he was allergic to his cat and this time plans to put his lovely friend down seemed to be the only way to fix the sneeze. The next day he went to his doctor to discuss what had been happening to him. The doctor ran some tests and said, "It does not look like your allergic to cat hair." "You are only allergic to daisies and peanut butter." Dickson was so confused because he had not had peanut butter for a long time; and obviously had not been out in his backyard lately to see the new growing daisy garden. When he came home he was hesitant to go inside the house for fear of encountering Dixie cat; and instead, decided to go to the backyard to spend some time. "Oh, my world!" "What are you doing Dixie?" he asked. You have been sunbathing in a bunch of daisy bushes. He was very mad at the cat, for making him so sick all these while. Dixie cat felt so bad and meowed all day, staying away from Dickson, who was mad with him. "What would a man do without his adorable Dixie cat?" Dickson thought. So, he put on a face mask and gloves; picked up Dixie cat and gave the cat a rough soapy bath. After that he told the cat to stop laying in the flowers because they make him sick. Eventually Dickson and Dixie cat got along again, found their play and they lived happily ever after.

THE END!