

Break A Leg

One time ago there was a lady named Jenny. She was really into comedy, and she always wanted to be a comedian. But there was only one problem. Her mother never did like comedy. The only reason Jenny liked comedy was because her dad was a comedian.

When Jenny got a little older, she got married to Paul. They only had one kid. His name was David. Jenny always loved her son and her husband. Jenny told David to stay in the house while she went to get some food.

While Jenny was at the store, she saw a television advertisement that said, "Comedy auditions. Anybody can join. The winner gets to be on the Ellen show and Saturday Night Live."

Jenny got so happy that she ran to her car and sped back to her house.

"Take me downtown," she told her husband. "Please. I saw a television commercial that said I can be a comedian."

"Let's go," Paul said.

They went to the place for the audition. Paul waited for 2 hours for Jenny to come back.

When she came back, she said with a big smile, "I got the job."

Paul got so happy for Jenny. They went back home to check on David, but he was asleep like always.

The next morning they called Jenny to come back to the studios. "We need you."

So she went back and they said, "You need to go to New York. You are going to love it over there. It's so beautiful."

Jenny rushed to her car and drove to her mom's house. When Jenny got there, her mom was so happy. But then Jenny told her the story. Her mom got so mad. She slapped Jenny in the face and started crying. Jenny ran to her car and started driving in the middle of the road. She slammed her brakes when she saw a deer in the road. She almost crashed into it, but she didn't. When she got to her house, she started telling her husband what happened. He told her, "You are never going to your mother's house again."

A couple of weeks later, Jenny got so happy to go to New York. She started getting money, and every day she got more famous for being a comedian.

The end.
