IT...

That was the day when it gave out. I was struggling to keep up with my racing mind, trying to get out the words, but all I could hear was that fatal high-pitched beeping noise coming from the machine to the right of me yelling the end is near. Lying on my deathbed, I saw blurry images of people rushing. Then, I felt a shock. I saw my mom and dad when I was eight running for the touchdown in a friendly game of football. Then it was black.

But I know that I did the right thing.

As I was lying in my hospital bed in a lot of pain, the doctor came in with the kind of face that shows sorrow. He traipsed over to me holding the death letter that stated that I needed a new liver. The room felt cold and I was suddenly all alone and scared. All I could think about was how will I survive this. He said he would get me a liver right away. And right at that moment I looked out my door of the doctor's office and overheard a lady saying, "Please help! My child he needs a new liver." The doctor said, "There is a long line. You will have to wait." I told my doctor, "Until that kid gets a liver, I'm not getting one." I went back to playing football, and when I would run it would feel like a 1,000 needles were being stuck into my side. It couldn't go on this way, so I went to my doctor and said, "Is there anything I can do to stop the pain?" He said get a new liver. I again said, "No, when everybody else in front of me gets one, I will finally get one." And I left the office.

The last few weeks were difficult because I had pains and seeing my team without me was heartbreaking. I was not a religious person, but I got down on my hands and knees and prayed to God. That was the day when it gave out. I was struggling to keep up with my racing mind, trying to get out the words, but all I could hear was that fatal high-pitched noise coming from the machine to the right of me yelling the end is near.
