Good Game, Leo

Leo was an elephant that wanted to play baseball. He really wanted to play, but the coach would not let him. The other animals thought he was crazy.

One day at the park the animals had baseball practice. Leo was there, too. When it was his turn to bat, he swung at the ball. He did not know what to do after swinging!

The coach said, "Run! Run, Leo!" Leo ran as fast as he could. He was safe at first base!

It was his teammates turn to go up.

After her, it would be Leo's turn to go again. Three strikes. She got OUT.

It was Leo's turn. One more miss and he would be OUT.

He hit the ball as hard as he could. "That ball is OUT of here!" the speaker said.

Everyone cheered. They lined up and shook hands. "Good game."
