Josh's Shark Encounter

This story is about a boy named Josh how wanted to come face to face with a shark. Josh knew that he needed a lot of practice before he got in the ocean with the sharks. Josh started to take scuba diving classes. While in his class he learned to use an oxygen tank and swim. Josh attended classes until he felt ready to encounter the sharks. One day Josh decided to get on a boat and drive to the middle of the ocean with his oxygen tank. When Josh was halfway in the ocean, he thought it would be better to have protection just in case the sharks would get to close and bite him. Josh decided to go back home and get a cage. Josh then drove back to the ocean, got on his boat and drove to the ocean. When he got there he threw the cage into the water put on his scuba diving gear and jumped in the water. He then swam down and got in the cage. After 5 minutes, a shark approached Josh. At that moment Josh felt scared however, after a while he noticed that sharks do not harm you if you don't harm them. After his encounter with the shark he got back on his boat he decided he wanted to become an Ichthyologist (a person who study fish). Josh attended school, became a biologist and got a job working with sharks.
