

Cesar

The Long Trip to Mexico

Cesar, his brother Angel, and his family were packing to go to Mexico on vacation. They would be happy to get out of their city home in Houston, Texas for a few days.

First, his smaller sister Sophia shouted, “Yay! We’re going to Mexico!” Then his brother said, “Mom, Dad, I’m ready!” But Cesar, the middle sibling, couldn’t find his shirt and thought, “Maybe I should try to convince Mom and Dad not to go.” He couldn’t imagine going all the way to Mexico without that shirt. To his surprise, his mom dug real deep in his closet and found it. “Come here, Cesar. I found it.” she shouted from across the hall. Then, she told Cesar, “Pack up, put on your clothes and come quickly because we’re already starting up the car!” So, Cesar slowed down some more. But it was alright because they waited for him.

Finally, they were on their way to Mexico. While heading there, Cesar’s dad heard Cesar’s stomach growling and said, “I couldn’t agree more with Cesar’s stomach. So, they stopped at Waffle House for a quick lunch. When they were all finished, Angel said, “Shouldn’t we eat more since it’s a long trip to Mexico?” “I think we should.” replied Cesar’s dad. Suddenly Sophia blurted out, “I need to go to the restroom!” Then the whole family said, “Me too!” Without looking behind, everyone raced to the restroom and looked at the doors as though it was a life or death choice, when it actually wasn’t.

Some hours later Cesar realized he was hungry again. “Mom, I’m starving. Ugh!” groaned Cesar. Right after saying that, his eyes locked on to something AMAZING. He looked at it surprisingly and asked, “Is this Mexico?”

“Of course, it is! Did you not expect it to have such a beautiful view of the ocean?” questioned his mom. Cesar could not even answer. He just kept looking out of the car window. Then his dad said jokingly, “Bet you’re not hungry anymore.”
