EXCEPTENCE of SURVIVAL

John was getting ready for his basketball practice. He put his tennis shoes on, and he was wearing a white jersey. When he was all ready he snuck out the window in his room. He snuck out because his dad dose not want him to play basketball. But his mom was fine for him to play basketball.

But she died last year in December 2018. When he snuck out through the window and going to his friend's house from the woods their neighbor saw him sneaking and then he told his dad that he sneaked out through the window with a basketball in his hand.

Then his dad went to the basketball court. But when he reached their he didn't see him anywhere. So he went to his friend's house. When he reached their John and his friend were walking out the front door. Then John's dad hold his wrist and took him home.

When they reached home his dad showed him all the bad grades he had. So his dad banned him from basketball and he took all the basketball posters from his room. But John still didn't listen to his dad. He kept playing basketball and kept sneaking out.

After a week his dad got to know that he is still sneaking out to play basketball. When his dad came home after work John wasn't home. When he came back home his dad took all 3 of his basketballs and deflated all of them.

While he was deflating the 3 basketballs John was pushing him and yelling don't do that please I love them more than I love you please stop. Then his dad pushed him back so he doesn't push him.

When he pushed John back his head hit the bed his dad didn't notice until the blood got under his feet. He picked John up and took him to urgent care as fast as he could. After a 6 hour surgery. The doctor told John's dad that this is a rare condition he is in coma but some people will get better if they wanna live but some people will not get better cause they don't wanna live. But in this case it's the second one he dose not wanna live.

After a few days. The doctor came to John's dad and said he is not getting better so if you want to take him home you can. Its your choice.

His dad took him home the next day. He used to talk to him the whole time and used to cry why is he not answering the questions he is answering. He even bought him 4 new basketballs.

A few days later all of John's friends came over to watch the basketball final with him. While they were watching something really surprising happen. John moved his fingers.

They rushed to urgent care and this time the doctor said that John is not in coma any more...

6years later

John was a professional basketball player and this time his dad was happy about it.
