

Marie's Life

By Doga O.

This is a story about Marie Davis who is in sixth grade and had no idea how to speak English. The story begins like this, Marie is a smart girl but has no idea how to speak English. It is Marie's first day of school and she is nervous, o how excited she was but as soon as she stepped inside the classroom everyone stared at her and then they started to whisper to their friends. But Marie saw only one person that was not.

She could only say hello, so she said hello to that person, that person introduced herself. Her name was Ally. She asked to teach her English at recess she said ok. But first Ally showed her the whole playground, and what she could do at recess. They had so much fun that day, she learned a couple of words, and they also played together at the playground. At the end of the day someone walked up to her, she said hello, that someone made her get in a bad mood because he said that she will never learn how to speak English.

Even if she did not believe that, it was hard on her. She talked to her mom and dad to feel better and it helped her. The next day she heard a lot of people talking about her. Ally stood up for her, o how much Marie thanked her. She was the best friend ever. The time passed and it was the end of the year. Even though she had a lot of tough times, she had good ones too with her friend Ally. She learned how to speak English. The only problem is that Ally was going to leave, and she is not going to be here next year.

So next they texted each other a lot. They both were sad but because they were texting a lot it felt like they were together every single day. Marie did fine. She got all A's and even extra points.

So that's the end of the story. The End
