

The Blood Moon

By: Jeremie A

On a dark Halloween night, a boy named James went trick-or-treating. He had gotten candy from all the houses except one, the McMitten's house. People whined that it was cursed and haunted, but that did not stop James from going in. Once James was in, he hollered, "Is anyone home". After that, the door immediately closed but fastly. James crawled into the living room with intimidation in his heart, as the lights flickered on and off. Once the lights were finally on, James saw three clowns standing around him. They chuckled and smiled with knives in their hands. James ran but it was too late. One of the clowns ripped and carved out James's heart, while the other two clowns ripped out his eyes with their bare hands. Blood dripped from James, drip and drop, drip and drop. The clowns hung James on the door as a memory for them and everyone else. Nobody ever went trick-or-treat in their lifetime again. Depression filled the air on Halloween night forever.
