Cling, clang! The swords clashed between Alexandra and a ninja guarding the dungeon. She knew if the dungeon was not defeated, the whole town of Steldon would be in terrible danger. She had to be courageous and strong! With one final stab, the ninja fell down to the floor and died. Her long, luscious locks flew while she bit an apple. She stepped into the chamber of stairs and walked slowly down. The echos of her footsteps were getting louder and louder while the light from the door got darker and darker. At the last step, she made it to a dark hallway with the only lights to guide her were small torches. Whoosh! A bat with a shining red light flew past Alexandra.

"It's a tracker." She whispered to herself. She whipped out her bow and arrow and killed the bat in one hit. 'Who would that be coming from though?' She asked. A faint echo said, 'Me.' After hearing that echo, she quickly sprinted north, wanting to discover that echo. While sprinting, she caught glimpse of a boy. "Wait!" "You need me!" Alexandra quickly stopped and asked, "Why?" with her hands on her hips.

Alexandra was used to being solo, so she didn't think much of being with someone, especially a boy with a big backpack full of water. "He's so lousy." She thought. "Earth to you!" The boy said as he tapped Alexandra's shoulder. "Why would you want me to be with you loser?" Alexandra yelled and ran away from the boy, he looked miserable. She had to go solo. All of a sudden, a fairy poofed out of nowhere. "Please help me and my guardians." "My kingdom is in danger."

"Where are you from?" Alexandra asked. "I am from Narcania, the town above Steldon." When Alexandra was about to ask another question, poof! The fairy was gone. Strong winds flew in Alexandra's eyes, and a giant figure flew its way into the dungeon.

The wind blew away, and in front of Alexandra was a huge, black tailed dragon. Whenever you may see a dragon, you may think it will shoot fire at you and then you turn into ashes. But no, the dragon signaled Alexandra to get on, so she hopped on and off into the wild they went. Soon, they were in the clouds. In the distance, they were at Narcania. Alexandra was shocked. The kingdom was sitting on top of a big cloud. There were magical buildings, and in the middle, a castle. She hopped off the dragon and was in shock. Bright colors roamed the place. Alexandra ran to the castle, but she made sure not to get caught. With a glance, a guard turned his head. With quick thinking, Alexandra hid behind a potted plant. When the guard turned around again, Alexandra quietly stepped inside. She looked up and down, trying to find an entrance somewhere that related to the dungeon below. Soon, she found a lever behind a bookshelf. Pull! When the room opened up, there was another staircase. Alexandra rolled her eyes. She walked down slowly, making sure no one knew what she was doing. At the last step, Alexandra was shocked. There were piles and piles of golden treasures. Immediately, Alexandra's mind was filled with thoughts. "Who's is it?" "Where did it come from?"

Alexandra was planning to run back and tell the citizens, but... A giant shadow popped in front of her. Then in front of her, the shadowed appeared, and it was a giant! He had green skin, blue hair, and a giant sword. Alexandra knew she had to give it her all. She knew if she got one stab from that sword, she would poof. The sword was coming her way. Alexandra grabbed her sword from her pocket and swiftly dodged the attack. Once the giant was dead, a soft whispering came from above. Alexandra ran up to see the problem, and it was the queen! She was with some people in masks, and a time bomb? "The bomb is set to 10 hours before it destroys us and the towns below us." Alexandra was shocked. She went to a safe house and made a plan. First go behind the castle, dig a tunnel to the meeting room, and disable the bomb. Easy! Of course, Alexandra underestimated the plan, but none the less, got to work. She dug a hole, but when she was under the castle, the alarm rang. Guards of the castle were investigating the whole town.

This was a perfect time to disable the bomb. She flipped the off switch and the bomb defused. One problem, in order to fully get the bomb out, she had to drop it over the edge without getting caught. Soon, she was almost there, but guards were yelling, "Put that down~!" She didn't want to put the bomb down, but the bomb was so heavy, Alexandra could not take it anymore and so she fainted to the ground. The guards turned the bomb back on, but now only for 5 hours. Then the guards took Alexandra away. Soon, she woke up, confused and nauseous. She was looking up and down to find a way to escape and, where was she? Turns out, she was in an underground prison.

She couldn't continue her mission until... Yes!
There was a trap door she could climb out of. She got a wire from under the bed, and picked the lock. She climbed out of the prison and ran to that tunnel she built, and defused the bomb. She snuck out carefully without dropping the bomb.
She was almost to the edge of the cloud when..
SHE SAW THE BOY SHE REJECTED IN THE DUNGEON! "Hi?" "Wanna team?" "Sure." "BUT HELP ME CARRY THIS BOMB!" "Okay!" They carried the bomb to the cloud and they were ready to save the world. "3... 2... 1..!" They ran back to the dock and rode the dragon back home.
