

Dogs from the Future

By: William

In 2035, the world only had cats and bunnies, but not dogs because seven years earlier, in 2028, China and the United States had a war. The United States had decided to use the strongest dog breeds like the American Pitbull Terrier, Rottweilers, Dogo Argentinos, Dobermans, and Kangal Shepherds to help fight the war. But as a result, all of the dogs died and the war was lost. Seven years after the war, a 35-year old man that studied dogs of the past had an idea. He reu-sed all the metal in the trash area and picked up old dog bones and organs to make a robotic watchdog. One day, the man got a call from the government asking if he could build 60 watchdogs to help take revenge on China. The government offered the man 60 thousand billion dollars and so the man accepted. He took a month to build 60 watchdogs and he kept building even more after that. Three months later, the government was ready to take their revenge on China. That day, China had bought some tigers to help their side win the battle, but the U.S. government was ready to attack. The watchdogs had explosives and laser eyes. The tigers were so scared, that they ran and never came back. The watchdogs got rid of half the Chinese army and the rest of them surrendered. So, the U.S.A. won back the war. They continued to make more watchdogs. The inventor of the watchdogs got his 60 thousand billion dollars. He became rich and lived happily ever after.
