

The Kid with Imagination

by William R.

One day there was a boy named Andrew and he was five years old. He was the smartest kid in Kindergarten and all the kids were jealous, so they picked on him. They put stickers on him that said, "kick me." So, the 4th graders always kicked him. But, Andrew had this journal, and he always wrote in it, but he had no friends at recess. He always brought his journal with him, and he thought of an idea! So, he opened his journal and, instead of writing, he drew. Soon after, he had a best imaginary friend named Blue. Then, a few bullies showed up and they snatched his journal then Andrew said, "Give it back!" The bullies pushed him over and he was about to step on him. Then, a kid came and said, "Leave the him alone!" So, he snatched back the journal and they ran for their lives. They ran and ran and ran. Soon, it was time for lunch and the bullies went to the principal's office. "Hey! Thanks for helping back there," said Andrew. "No biggie," the kid said. After that, they became best friends, and, in the future, thy both got journals, too.
