

The Lost Boy

Aleah R. and Olivia T.

One day there was a five-year-old boy and his family. They were walking in New York in Time Square. At one moment the boy sped up, he saw the most magnificent toy ever made. The toy was shiny, gold and had beautiful tires on the car. The moment he was looking at the car he looked back and didn't see his parents. He walked ahead, then realized he walked to far. He went around asking people, "Have you seen some parents walking around the city?" No one answered him. He cried and cried with sadness in his eyes. He looked and looked all around but, still didn't find them. Then everything stopped. He saw one-person that didn't stop. He was scared but he still went to him. When he saw him and said have you seen some parents. "The man replied yes." The boy started to jump up and down and got so excited he screamed. The man said follow me and I'll show you the way. So, the boy followed the man to his parents. The boy asked, "What is your name?" as they were walking. The man said Billy then the boy said that's my father name very quietly. Then the boy started to cry because he was thinking of his father. As they were walking the boy saw the same store where he had lost his parents then he thought that they were going in circles and the boy said to the man we were going in circles the whole time. The boy did get mad but as he said to the man " I will give you one more chance as the man thanked him" and the man said I will lead you to your parents. That even the boy saw somebody walking to the store wear he lost his parents so he went into the store and looked for the toy he loved so he found the toy and he also found his mom he got so excited he just hugged her and he started to cry but, he was so happy he barely could talk. The reason why the mom was there is that she was looking for the toy to surprise her son if he ever came back the parents were looking for the boy to. They were so worried for him. Then when they got home the dad smiled at the boy and the mom. They were so happy then the family lived happily ever after.
