

Title: Reflection By: Alisha G

Friday the 13, 2003

Love you Sally! Exclaimed Sally's mom. Bye mom! Sally sighed as she switched on the television.

Sally decided to watch a scary movie that night. Sally heard something from outside her door, she glanced outside and saw nothing. Sally didn't care too much about it. As she watched her movie, she heard the strange sound again. Sally felt goosebumps on her arm, she shivered and continued watching the movie. The sound began again this time Sally got up to check. When she left her seat, she thought nothing was wrong because she made sure nothing was wrong about an hour ago. When she walked towards the door it became cold, Sally stared outside nothing was wrong. She felt like someone was out there. When she sat down, she gasped she could see someone standing outside her glass door or so she thought. Sally immediately dialed 911. Sally closed her curtains and sat down catching her breath. When the police got there they quickly investigated her house and the backyard. They found 2 clues wet water behind her couch and blood on the floor beside the couch as well. They told Sally that he might've been inside her house and that the man she saw outside was just a reflection of him standing beside her couch. Sally called her parents with tears rolling down her eyes and fright shadowing her body.