

Gloom Spreads In the Most Horrifying Way

By: Alejandro P.

A colossal wave of depression washed over everyone as I was building a storm shelter out of sand. But in reality, it all happened in my house where everyone who enters my house lost their sense of humor and becomes gloomy. The walls were becoming blue as I lost all motivation to work hard. My heart was thrown to a stop as I became lethargic and couldn't do anything to cheer anybody up. People felt less and less useful until it came to the point where there was nothing left of the house.

It spread as quick as fire and it went on. Within two weeks there was nothing left of the world. We waited months, years, decades and still nothing! By now they wanted to have freedom of boredom and gloom more than anything. Then a man named Professor Miguel Gomez searched for a cure but before, found the disease. So he tested it on his well known friend Ollie Rodriguez who loves to just sit down and let boredom wash over him. Finally, in the year 2999, New Year's Eve it was all settled.

The cure was very unsuccessful due to failure of heart, which did not go so well because they found the cure themselves. "The meaning of life has to be to live," they said with miraculous joy" So let's barge into life and make an adventure of our life! Do you really just wanna sit there all day and do nothing? Instead explore, play, or have fun with friends?" Not one human did not follow that man or they were not human at all. They swam through Asia's deep seas, knifed Africa's mighty jungle, and boogied through the Amazon.
