

The Girl Who Loved to Write

by Declan T.

Once a girl loved, loved, loved writing, but she was very poor so her parents couldn't afford to get her the supplies for writing. So every day she went to school she loved language arts. All it taught her was to be a better writer, but she couldn't write at home. So one day she went to a symphony. There was a writing competition with a prize of $500.00. She immediately entered and she won. She immediately knew what to do, and that was get as many new writing supplies as she could so she could write at home. There was a writing competition in town. She won and went to nationals and won that so she got $1,000,000. She supported her family with the money and bought a store and sold her stories.
