

A Split Family: By Tony O.

Desperate to forget;
But I still want to remember.
All the smiles and laughs;
Just thrown away. Over the;
Fights and anger of his parents.
Legally split by one signature.
Brother and sister crying;
When they get the news.
No more laughs and no more smiles;
All he can look forward to now is agony.
This is his first taste of the real world;
Bitter and sickening it is to his life.
He wonders if it is partly his fault;
This thought saddens him.
What could he have done that;
Would have changed their decision.
He still can't believe that they are;
Throwing 11 years of their lives away.

Maybe it is a good decision;

But I doubt that's true.

Tears fill his saddened eyes;

And he can't believe his ears.

Mom goes one way and;

Dad goes the other.

His family has just been split;

And so has his heart.
