

The Legend of Elidia

By: Shrihan G

I was startled by my alarm clock it was 4:17, a very unusual time so I woke up. Neither my mom nor dad set the clock so I curiously got dressed and headed for school. I got to school right before the bell rang and saw a folded piece of paper half hidden inside my desk. It seemed to be calling to me to open it so I hesitantly opened it. In what seemed to be ancient calligraphy the note said after school for the nearest forest.

I slipped the note into my backpack just as the class was starting and wondered who could have given it to me. Strange things like this never happened to someone like me. The last and only time something strange had happened was....I sighed and shook my head clearing my mind from the gloomy memory.

"Hey Marth are you listening" Mrs. Yaaliz questioned with meaningful nod at the board and pointed her finger at the question. I startled and looked up to see the whole class staring at me and giggling.

"Yes ma'am" I responded in a dismal voice pondering what would happen to me later. After the last bell rang I jumped out my seat with a mixture nervousness and curiosity at the mysterious note that had been in my thoughts all day. I found the nearest forest and found an invisible wall between two trees. Before I could think I felt as if an invisible force was pushing me into the wall and somehow went through my body feeling like jelly. As I got to my feet I noticed that the familiar forest was no longer behind me. A young girl was looking at me like she expected me she said "this is the Land of Elidia she said "lets go the town of Teghner."

The girl said "you are in Elidia and you are here to save this world" now I was really confused she explained "you're here because your great great grandfather saved this world. And now you are here to save it, too" I asked what is there to save if my grandfather already saved it. She sighed and sat down beside me. The people of town will explain it more so I followed her. We walked for a long time then we saw a lot of people. Lots of people explained it to me I finally decided that I was going to help this I got a sword from a mysterious sage it mysteriously had a hole by I didn't want to refuse the offer so I set off with a talking map it kept me good company together we fought lots of creatures as the news was spreading around I went to the leader of the monsters as I walked inside I feel my body shaking in nervousness so I went up the long black corridor to meet the leader I knew the leader is making the monsters hostile then figured out he was my long lost brother he was jealous so I forced him back.
